

Sadé Ali, MA, is the President of First Nations, LLC, a behavioral health training and consulting organization in Delaware. She holds faculty positions at Brown University, Temple University's College of Health Professions, and Drexel University's School of Public Health. Ms. Ali is First Nations Mi'kmaq from the Sturgeon Clan and the Elder and Medicine Keeper of the Mid-Atlantic Two Spirit Alliance. She has traveled extensively across the U.S. and Canada to provide training on Two Spirit history and culture, and culturally appropriate recovery management and resilience-promoting training in mental health and addictions. Ms. Ali has been in recovery and the field of behavioral health services for 48 years.

She is a former Senior Associate with Altarum in Washington, DC, where she provided training and technical assistance to Tribal Governments and other providers engaged in SAMHSA's Access to Recovery initiative. Ms. Ali is the retired Deputy Commissioner of Philadelphia's Department of Behavioral Health and Intellectual disAbility Services where she assisted the Commissioner in managing a billion dollars' worth of behavioral health services for the City of Philadelphia. She also served on SAMHSA's Center for Substance Abuse Treatment National Advisory Council for four years.

Ms. Ali published her thesis, other scholarly articles, and a textbook on culturally appropriate recovery and resilience services, ending health disparities through enhanced access to care, and the effect of intergenerational trauma on North America's indigenous peoples. She is a co-author of the Philadelphia Behavioral Health Transformation Practice Guidelines for Recovery and Resilience-Oriented Treatment, which is a framework for the fields of mental health and substance use treatment services that is used worldwide. Several years ago, Ms. Ali published Social Healing Words: Using Language to Promote Recovery and Resilience for Individuals, Families, and Communities.

Ms. Ali holds a bachelor of arts degree in counseling psychology and a master of arts degree in clinical psychology. A lifetime member of SAIGE, the Society of American Indian Government Employees, Ms. Ali serves on the SAIGE board of directors.