Bringing Recovery Supports to Scale

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTER STRATEGY

Jeremy Countryman is the program director at the CAFÉ TA Center, one of five SAMHSA-funded Consumer and Consumer Supporter National Technical Assistance Centers. He has held this position since 2010. In this capacity, he works with peers across multiple states to develop authentic consumer-run organizations that promote recovery and represent the consumer voice. As CAFÉ TAC focuses on supported education for individuals with mental health needs who are in higher education, he has had an opportunity to develop insight into the complex challenges associated with helping students with mental illness thrive on campus and the strategies that can help these students succeed. Jeremy is both an individual with mental health lived experience as well as a parent of adolescent children with disabilities and behavioral health needs.
